

Thoughtful.
Courageous.
Independent.
Our Senator.

Susan Collins has always been rated one of the most independent members of the U.S. Senate — a thoughtful and bipartisan thinker always voting to put Maine first.

That was her approach when the Senate voted to confirm Justice Brett Kavanaugh to the Supreme Court with a bipartisan majority.

Senator Collins showed true courage as she faced death threats, needed 24/7 police protection — even had opponents try to coerce her with shameful attempted bribery.

She looked closely at the evidence, pushed for additional investigations and carefully weighed all the facts before giving a remarkable speech called “the finest moment of this Congress and in any confirmation fight in many years.”

Susan did what she always does: voted her conscience and put Maine first.

Thank You, Senator Collins.
